DESERTED

Is the Home of the Homeless, the Capital of the United States of America.

(SPECIAL TO THE TELEGRAM)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—This home of the homeless, the capital of the greatest republic on earth, is practically deserted this gloomy Christmas season, for everyone who can do so has gone "home" to spend the holidays. Washington is really little more than a camp where people from other states tarry while earning their stipend from the national government. There is little civic pride, little real interest in the city itself. Nearly everyone is a stranger to everyone else, and the most genuine Washingtonians, perhaps, are the hundred thousand or more colored people who enjoy here more fully than elsewhere their "rights" and swarm about the public offices in various capacities, mostly menial but in some cases holding fat jobs. The bulk of the colored population are fairly law-abiding but characteristically shiftless and of little value to the community. There is, of course, an element resident here composed of the shop keepers and "old families" but in the main Washington is a city like no other in the country in that all people are mainly professed citizens of other states, voting, if at all in the various states from which they originally came. This helps to explain why there is a lack of civic pride in Washington, and why Christmas and other occasions which means so much to most people mean little here.

A new bayonet lies along the barrel of a rifle normally, but is thrown into position for service by pressing a button on the stock of the weapon.

Books Are the Best CHRISTMAS GIFTS

The perfect gift is of both use and pleasure. From books we acquire the most useful thing in the world—knowledge, and in them we exercise the most pleasant thing—imagination.

The perfect gift is of permanent value. It sounds a chord of sympathy in the giver and his friend. Books are living, vibrant things. There is a book that will convey each possible thought or emotion.

WE CAN HELP YOU CHOOSE THAT BOOK.

STORE OPEN EVERY EVENING UNTIL CHRISTMAS.
